Who is the workshop for?

Join us if you work or plan to work with diverse groups, of which members come from various nationalities, religions, cultures and social backgrounds.

We welcome especially:

- organisers and coordinators of workcamps (international voluntary camps) and youth exchanges,
- educators and facilitators of international groups.

What is the workshop goal?

We aim to present and discuss how to facilitate the process of team-building in international and multi-religious groups attending voluntary camps so that you can improve your practices in your future projects.

Our donor

The event is organised within the “Peace in Diversity” project and is co-funded by the European Union.

What to expect from the programme?

Through the participation, you will:

- meet up to 20 fellow workcamp coordinators and international educators,
- build your capacity on the topic of peacebuilding and peaceful coexistence on a micro level, in diverse groups,
- get to know practical tools for peace and nonviolent conflict resolution that can be used during workcamps and other international projects,
- learn how to organise and conduct international activities that bring the best results and lasting change to the participants,
- strengthen competences for delivering inclusive learning opportunities,
- get access to recommended resources on diversity and inclusion.

The workshop leaders

The workshop will be facilitated by two experienced and certified trainers, experts in adult education, and – at the same time – peace activists.

Natalie Jivkova from Bulgaria has been involved in SCI locally and internationally since 2002 and has co-developed the Peace Education in Practice online learning course.

Gośka Tur from Poland is a sociologist, a certified trainer, and a life-long SCI activist. She has led numerous international training courses on peace issues and diversity.

Natalie and Gośka are proud creators of the Facilitator's Cards, SCI Peace Cards, and My Peace Journal.

How to take part in the workshop?

Fill in a short application form here.

We will continue accepting applications until the free slots get filled in.

Before you apply

Before you apply, please keep in mind the following:

- the event language will be English,
- it is a workshop and not a webinar – we expect your active participation,
- you need to attend the full event duration.

Questions?

If you have further questions regarding the workshop, write to us at training@sci.ngo.

We are looking forward to your application!
